Continuation of 3. NOTE: The newly added limitation regarding the location of the mantle-side fill opening changes the scope of the invention and will require a new search.

Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because:

On pages 8 and 9, Applicant argues that Keller does not teache a 'combustion zone'. The examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. The examiner points out that a 'combustion chamber' provides very little structure to the claimed apparatus. The examiner interprets a 'combustion chamber' as a very broad limitation that provides structure for little more than a simple chamber. As such, it is the examiner's position that the chamber 48 does qualify as a combustion chamber. It is also noted that the operation of a chamber (combustion or mixing) is a process limitation that does not distinguish an apparatus over the prior art.

On pages 10 and 11, Applicant argues that one of ordinary skill would not modifiy Keller with the catalyst fill opening of Autenrieth because the structure of Autenrieth is not similar to that of Keller. The examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. Providing an opening in a reactor wall to more quickly insert and remove catalyst (regardless of the shape or material of the catalyst) is a feature well known in the art, and although the two reactors are not identical, making the necessary changes to the location of the opening and the size of the opening to accommodate different types of catalyst would be an obvious modification to one of ordinary skill in the art.

On page 13, Applicant argues that the combination of Keller and Stewen is not obvious and would not have been made by one of ordinary skill in the art because Stewen teaches a progressively changing cross-sectional structure of the bricks, which is contrary to Keller's need for a short contact time of the gas with the catalyst. The examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. The examiner points out that although Stewen teaches such a structure with a progressively changing cross-sectional structure, Stewen also teaches a structure where the cross section is constant (see Figs. 1 and 2) and would therefore be suitable for the structure of Keller.
